E.I.D. Trustee to Be Appointed, April 29

Water users of the Eastern Irrigation District will late this month elect a member of their Board of Trustees to fill a vacancy caused by the expiry of the term of Henry Dal of Duchesne. The election will be held Thursday, April 29, throughout the district. In eleven polling divisions.

Four nominations have been received for the position. Harry Dahl retiring trustee will stand for re-election, and Robert Irwin, Patricia, W. Tait White, Brooks, and Geo. W. Woodward, Brooks, are also voting. The polls will be open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Under the statute, the general manager, E. L. Gray, is returning officer.

Water users are requested by the District to familiarize themselves with the area of each polling division in which they reside. Votes cannot be polled in any division but the division of residence. Voters' lists are being prepared and will be available for inspection some time in advance of the election day.

This is the second election for trustees to be held in the District. The first was conducted on May 25, 1935, to elect the original board, consisting of Carl Anderson, chairman, Robert Scott, and Henry Dahl. Their terms were three years, two and one, but as the year of organization was not included, it was not necessary to hold another election until 1937.

The World of Wheat

A perfect wheat is badly needed by farmers in the vast areas of Western Canada. The rust arm comprises the whole of Manitoba, and as well Saskatchewan, was east of a vertical line through Shillbrook, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw.

For many years the wheat plant breeders in the United States, Canada and in other countries, have been endeavoring to produce a suitable rust-resistant wheat. Several varieties have now been located for use in Canada and other varieties are now under test. The most widely distributed of the rust-resistant varieties at the present is a few days earlier than Marquis, somewhat higher yielding, and is rust-resistant to a high degree.

Thatcher has about the same milling and baking qualities as Marquis. It has a well developed strength of straw. The defects of Thatcher is that the kernels are not of such a good shape as the Marquis berry, and as well they have rather a dull color, so that the grain grades, on the average, about one fifth of a grade less than Marquis.

Other rust-resistant wheats are Remona (a product of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, Winnipeg) and Argus (developed by the University of Saskatchewan).

Following factors have tended to raise the price: Heavy consumption of wheat in Continental Europe—Spain purchases Argentine wheat—Russia and half stores may lower yield and quality of Indian crops—Wet weather delays sowing field work in Europe—Poland produces its grain exports—First Argentine crop estimate 50 million bushels below last year.

Following factors have tended to lower the price: Bread prices raised in Argentina and Great Britain—Indian wheat crop estimated 275 million bushels—Regular demand for Iraqian and Karoon barley in Holland—Germany purchases Turkish rye

Crowfoot Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Jorgensen were Bassano visitors on Friday.

Five successive days of severe wind storms came to the town blowing this spring. First seeding reported was April 14th. All seeding operations are well under way at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Weeks and family.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Bassano Mutual Telephone Company was held at the home of Mrs. Hettelboer. There is no more or less to be done in the interests of the Company and it was voted on that at the end of the seeding period, all men folk get together and repair all of the line and reset what posts need resetting, thus avoiding any unnecessary expense to the shareholders. The Company reported over $40 in the treasury, and to reduce the monthly rate from $1.50 to $1.00 to shareholders.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Walker with Mrs. Walker's sister, Miss Marie Murchison were dinner guests at the Hettelboer home. Miss Murchison who has been visiting here all winter expects to leave soon for the States.

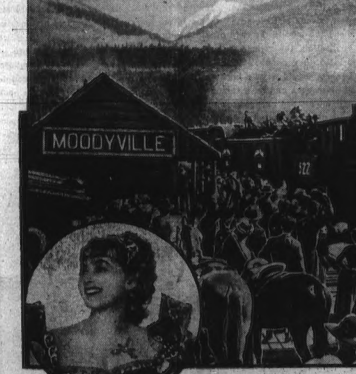

Tom and Ed Hottelboer, together with their sister who has been here for some time, spent Sunday visiting friends and relatives in Glencliff.

Mrs. Blair expects to leave this week-end for her home in Los Angeles, California.

The pupils of Abitawish school are looking forward to going into town for the Commemoration Celebration on the 13th of May.

Several of the Community motored into town Saturday and saw "Green Lights" a picture very well worth seeing.

Silent Barriers—Canadian Epic

Stanley Baldwin in London, England, recently, and his Canadian premiere in Montreal. The picture, which will be shown in Bassano, Canada, in the near future is based on Alan Paton's book, "The Great Divide," and recalls the tremendous struggle waged against Nature by the human race in the Canadian Rockies last summer. The picture was made in the Canadian Rockies last summer.

This Gaumont British production includes such stars as Richard Arlen, Barry MacKay, Annette Collier, Lilli Palmer, and J. Farrell MacDonald, who relieve the lives of pioneers who didn't know the meaning of the word "quilt". The layout shows a scene from the picture, the arrival of a train at Moodyville. Janet Lilli Palmer, one of the beautiful stars of the picture.

COUNTRY EDITORS

During the past two years country editors have had to take some rough rides from those in power, simply because they did not see fit to advocate certain theories which they did not think were feasible. It is refreshing therefore to find that they are not despised and rejected of all men at last. Coming to their rescue is the Financial Post, which has pleasant things to say not only of the editors, but of weekly newspapers. We rather enjoyed reading this tribute and pass it along.

"An example of journalistic courage of a very high order has recently been displayed by the country weeklies of Alberta. It is said that more than 95% of the weekly newspapers of the province have opposed Mr. Aberhart and his social credit follies. They have consistently exposed the money messiah's political hypocrisies and combatted the fallacious and, at times, more intimate contact with the local people than the country weekly editor and no one is more dependent upon their good will and support.

"The man who knows nothing of the problems of the publishing business it may seem that this opposition to Mr. Aberhart is a perfectly normal course for the country weeklies of Alberta to pursue. But if one appreciates the position occupied by the country weekly publisher or editor in his community it will be seen that it has needed a good deal of fortitude for these men to take stand that is momentarily most unpopular even though in the long run it must prevail.

"The country weekly publisher is usually the chief job printer in his community. He makes his living out of the advertising of the local merchants; and by supplying the people of his community with their bills of sale, their posters, their letterheads, their statement forms and so on. No one is more intimate contact with the local people than the country weekly editor and no one is more dependent upon their good will and support.

"Alberta has been engulfed in a wave of mass hysteria. Social credit has become the fetish of a few and emotional minority religion. Any man who refuses to be swept along by the unthinking masses, when such an emotional tide takes hold of things, is usually as unpopular as a loyalist in times of rebellion, a democrat at a Fascist demonstration, or a judge at a lynching party. He is jeered at, reviled and persecuted.

"The simplest thing for the country editors of Alberta to have done would have been to go along with Aberhart and social credit and then change back as the people's mind changed. But the country editors of Alberta decided to hold out for sanity and common sense.

"The courage that they have shown is typical of the type of stable, honest leadership at all times displayed by the country press of Canada. Canada's rural weeklies are seldom swayed by those hysterical outbursts of political extremes, which seem so easily to catch hold of mass opinion in cities, only to give way in time to extremes of opposite thought. If one wants to know what the nation really thinks at heart, what its true common sense viewpoint is, one can usually find it by a perusal of the editorial pages of the country weeklies of Canada.

"The present situation in Alberta merely demonstrates a truth that has been recognized for many years by shrewd observers of contemporary opinion in Canada."

E. I. D. LAND SALES

The Eastern Irrigation District has no more land for sale—at least at present. According to a published announcement under the signature of the management no negotiations leading to sales of land, nor any applications therefor will be indulged in or dealt with until after 31st of July, next.

If anything were needed to prove that the District is on the highway to success as an irrigation project, this is it. Land sales in the District as a result of the scarcity of irrigable land, have increased tremendously in recent months. While this is a good omen so far as the present contract holder is concerned, it is a tendency which can be carried too far. We do not desire to see the men on the land become mere speculators, who are here today and gone tomorrow—if they can get an immediate profit.

THE LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS

The Alberta Legislative Assembly has adjourned until June 7th next or earlier upon notice. Since the session convened a great many new Statutes have been enacted, and many of those enacted within recent years have been overhauled. Nearly 100 bills were presented, and although some were withdrawn, the members may be satisfied with the amount of new legislation. That is to say if they are satisfied that volume is all that matters.

The Attorney General is to be congratulated when he gave voice to the thought, that members instead of urging the passage of new and untried legislation, might give that which has been passed a reasonable opportunity of being enforced, before it is changed again.

That and the old proposal revived by Fred Anderson, M.L.A. for Calgary, (who, incidentally, at one time worked at the Bassano Dam) for a reduction in membership to 20 with increased seasonal indemnities for that 20, appear to us as sound.

The likelihood, however, is that as 43 would of necessity have to vacate their seats in the House, the proposal will receive but scant consideration from the Assembly. But some day people will have their way in this as they have a nasty habit of attaining their ends, in the long run.

A reputation is a dangerous thing. If it's a good one, it's hard to live up to, and if it's a bad one, it's hard to live down.

It is much easier to be a philosopher if a man has his board paid for a few weeks ahead.

Our object must be to stabilize the very moderate democracy we now enjoy and distribute it more widely.

The greatest waste we have in Canada today is the men and women who are out of work.—A. A. Nease, M.P.

A New Benett Has Emerged

By Bruce Hutchison

The Canadian people imagine that if there is one man they really know it is Benett. Benett, they don't. They know the old Benett, the Benett of the Depression years, the lonely, desperate Benett who brooded over this capital like a kind of perpetual thunder cloud with occasional lightning, for five years. But they certainly don't know the new Benett, who came back here from a world tour and a year of enforced leisure, an entirely changed man.

Even Ottawa hasn't learned to know the new Benett yet, though it has heard rumors of a new multiplicity and gentility. In the House, to the public, he is much the same—emphatically in his cleavage, his extravagance of speech, his uncanny grasp of detail. But when you spend two hours with him in his blue-upholstered office in the south-west corner, you find that time and life and mortality have done something to Mr. Benett.

They say here that he will retire before the next election, and while this appears to be his present mood, no one really knows, and tomorrow, with one of those sudden bursts of enthusiasm, those streaks of boyishness that are the most attractive things about this strange and unprecendented creature, he may plunge into the fight again.

A New Outlook

But for the moment he sits back in his chair. He throws his legs over the arm of the chair and lounges in his superlative clothes and talks about life. At sixty-seven that is what a man likes to talk about—life and the future of things which he will not see, the old mystery. At sixty-seven, the things he struggled for even at sixty, the glittering prizes the public rewards, seem pretty small.

They seem pretty small to Mr. Benett now. I do not think he cares a whoop whether he is ever prime minister of Canada, again or what the public thinks of him. He is content to leave his reputation to the record, leaving perfectly well as it will destroy himself. Benett's command during a hurricane where there was no time to back and scintillate, no opportunity to make the kind of benign reputation which comes to commanders in time of peace and prosperity.

He knows that perfectly well, and he leaves history to judge him against the background of his times, his difficulties, and his opportunities. And he has little complaint against destiny in general. It was good to him up to the time he became prime minister. It is good to him now. He is probably happier than he ever was, while pursuing the glittering prizes.

Tremendous Energy

The sheer energy of the man is overwhelming. A long interview with him is tiring, but invigorating, like a walk on a frosty day. Mr. King's office is a temple of power and energy. A classroom where you may learn much by listening to a lecture. Mr. Benett's office is like a blacksmith shop, where the small things are hammered into you, white hot, where there is always the ring of steel, now loud, now low, but ceaseless.

Mr. Benett's talk is ceaseless, but it is not garrulous. It is diffuse, all-embracing, but it never bores you for an instant. He starts out, at your request, to talk about Canadian politics, but within a moment he has jumped to the South African War, sketched the entire British campaign, detailed the history of the Boers, directed the whole, explained the particular virtues of the potter of the West, outlined the career of Alexander the Great, traced the fall of Rome, and quoted Theodore Roosevelt's speeches on the Monroe Doctrine. And all this almost in one breath, in a single surge of speech, in an unwavering volcano of sound.

Fire Still There

This final phase of his career—if it is the final phase—is the most attractive of all. Mr. Benett has time now to look about, to interest himself in other men, in the unimportant things of life which always turn out to be the only important ones. The fire is still there, the volcanic energy, the encyclopedic mind which can remember almost every fact he has ever heard, the freak memory which recalls at one moment the national debt of 1911, and the inscription on a silver bugle belonging to a Boy Scout troop in South Africa. The fire is consuming flame, which often burned friend and enemy alike and all but consumed Mr. Benett himself.

Mr. Benett's views on things as expressed in such an interview are not, of course, for publication. But they are bold, titanic, as you would expect, coming in this case, taking in not merely the history of his government, not merely the field of world politics, but the prospects of our entire civilization, the remote future of our human species. If they could be printed, they would startle and delight you. Now that he has time, Mr. Benett should write a book; or rather he should sit and talk for a couple of afternoons and let a stenographer take it down and write it into a book without a word changed, so that none of the original flavor would be lost, none of the strange, fierce fire which yet burns in this man. Then, perhaps, history would understand him, for his public record will not reveal him. His public record may well be the least important part of him, his worldly success a side-line. The interesting, the unique thing, is not what Benett has done or not done, but Benett himself. We may look on greater men, but not on his like again.—Calgary Herald.
